

One Canada Crossword

Across

- Diefenbaker's "Northern _____," a bold strategy designed to stimulate natural resource-based research and fiscal growth in inaccessible and underdeveloped regions of Canada.
- One of Canada's national languages, of which Diefenbaker was criticized for his limited knowledge and skill.
- The 'nickname' for the federal political party that Diefenbaker led.
- Where Diefenbaker was born
- the surname of the Premier of Quebec who succeeded Maurice Duplessis in 1960 and whose victory triggered the "Quiet Revolution."
- The number of defendants Diefenbaker saved from the death penalty as a defense attorney.

Down

- The type of animals that call Sable Island, Nova Scotia, home and that Diefenbaker legally protected during his term as Prime Minister.
- Diefenbaker's concept of creating the DCC was inspired by the American Presidential _____, which serve as memorials, museums, and research libraries.
- The right to vote in political elections, which Indigenous Peoples were finally granted in 1960 under the Diefenbaker Office.
- Diefenbaker was elected as _____ of the University of Saskatchewan in 1969; the same year, he announced his intention to donate his personal belongings and prime ministerial papers to the University.

13. The surname of the famed Métis general of the 1885 Northwest Resistance, who was one of the many visitors to the Diefenbaker homestead.
7. The type of infrastructure that Diefenbaker's "Northern Vision" intended to create in the Yukon and Northwest Territories; the campaign was nicknamed "_____ to Resources."
10. The surname of Canada's first Indigenous Senator, appointed by Diefenbaker in 1958.
14. Diefenbaker's vision for an inclusive Canada; he hoped that distinct identities would be a source of this, rather than division.