

Call for Question Submissions!

The Johnson Shoyoma School of Public Policy and the Diefenbaker Canada Centre at the University of Saskatchewan are developing a new online High School resource: Engaged Citizenship: Exploring Pathways to Leadership.

This program will include an in-depth exploration of the roles of Lieutenant Governor and Territorial Commissioner. Current representatives will be featured and invited to answer questions provided by high school students from across Canada!

Do you have a question about these unique, appointed positions? Are you curious about Canadian history and how equality, diversity and inclusion have begun to change the face of these roles?

Tell us what you'd like to know!

Email your questions (video or non-recorded) to dief.centre@usask.ca

